

Remo 101

Lesson 1: Introduction

Welcome to Remo, where our goal is to humanize the online event experience.

Before we get started building your first event, I'd like to introduce you to some terminology that's going to come in handy for this demonstration.

Right now, we're looking at the floor plan in conversation mode. The floorplan is modeled to look like a conference or an event space. On this floor plan, you'll find tables seating 2, 4, 6, & 8 guests. These are your left and right billboards. These are your banners. And this is your elevator for Floor Navigation.

Before you build your event, you should have information such as How many guests do you expect, The start and end date and time of your event, How many people you will need at each table, and Art to include company and event logos (this is provided for you for this demonstration). Some of these items are dictated by your plan and other items are dictated by the needs of your event.

Let's get started building!